Assignment 3: Maintaining a Record, Maintaining a Love of Literature and Becoming a Critic!

Your study of English thus far has been somewhat prescriptive, that is you have very much been told what to read and analyse.

As a successful sixth form student, however, you should be simply enjoying the process of reading, researching, writing and learning about Literature and Language. Your third assignment is to ensure you are maintaining a record of all you are reading, all you find interesting, from navigating classics, to the films you watch and the articles you read. The key is to be reflective - what is it, when is it, what have you enjoyed, the thoughts they have provoked, what is made you feel ...?

It is a satisfying process to keep a notebook in which you write down all of this, including cuttings and pictures; link it to other areas of study – although should you wish to do it electronically, that is fine too – they will be checked!
